“ She was the best mother a son could ever have. I was the youngest for which we spent the most time with while the rest of the kids were in school. She sold pantyhose when I was a toddler it was door to door because she never learned to drive. She wore my little legs out! We would walk for miles. What wonderfully memories I have, but I wasn't the best son in my adult years I did some things I was ashamed of. But she forgave me after I got back on track. She was the last of her kind, the stay at home mom. But she is now with my dad holding his hand and enjoying the afterlife. I miss them both terribly everyday! Love you guys forever and thank you for you love, your son Rick
